Strategic Education Governance (SEG)

What models of governance are effective in complex education systems? Which tools can help manoeuvre the reality of education governance?

In the past decades many countries have decentralised governance structures, giving more autonomy to local or school levels. In all systems an increasing number of stakeholders (teachers, parents, students, unions, companies etc.) are involved in deciding how education should be designed, delivered and monitored. These trends have increased the complexity of education systems, leaving decision makers on all governance levels with the question of how to successfully manoeuvre in this highly dynamic policy area.

Part of the OECD's Centre for Educational Research and Innovation (CERI), the SEG project works through analytical research, peer learning seminars, and thematic conferences to bring together state-of-the-art conceptual thinking with country experiences and concrete tools. In 2018 the project carries out country-based peer learning seminars, pursues development of the knowledge governance module for its nascent policy tool, as well as continuing research on new modes of governance.

We are looking for individuals with an interest in education governance, as well as with skills in any or all of the following areas:

- Research and analysis; particularly research methodology (quantitative and/or qualitative);
- Expertise in governance, indicator development, knowledge governance, stakeholder inclusion;
- Editing and proofreading papers for publication;
